Turnkey “Read for the Stars” Challenge

Give kids, and patrons of all ages, a chance to be proud of how much they read and of being an active member of your library’s community!

Create a Community Display

- Start with a blank display space in your library.
- Label it “Read for the Stars.”
- Set up a small writing station with paper stars.
- Post directions inviting patrons to contribute to your display.

Invite Patrons to Add a Star

- For every 20 minutes read, or book completed.
- For participation in library programs, activities, events, book clubs, and more!
- Adjust for your patrons! Decide when to add stars based on the community of readers your library serves, engagement goals, and past program participation.

Books, Videos & Activities to Get Kids Excited About Reading!

At Fabled Films Press, we collaborate with librarians and educators like yourself to develop free programs and educational resources that make it easier for you to maximize middle grade engagement.

But don't take our word for it!

What Librarians & Educators Have to Say:

The Nocturnals by Tracey Hecht

A K-6 All School Read Pick! Ask me about activities that connect Reading, Science, and Fun

"The range of books (early reader, chapter, nonfiction), the high-quality resources/activities, the FREE workshops/videos, the unfailingly positive communication—everything has been amazing!!"

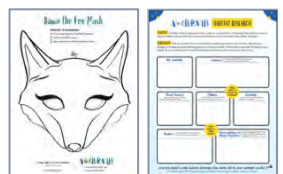

– Jenna Kakimoto, Special Education Teacher, Chester Elementary School, MA

"If you've got a kid who loves animal stories (especially starring animals other than the "usual suspects"), or mysteries, or funny books, this is the novel for him or her."

– Debbie McLeod, Children's Literature Professor, Johnson County Community College, KS

"The Nocturnals series is sure to inspire a love of reading and appreciation of nature in young readers. The fun activities from the publisher help to spark the children's creativity and further conversations about what they read. I am glad we have been able to build such a good relationship."

– Lee Penna, Events & Community Outreach Coordinator, Secaucus Public Library, NJ

Pippa Park by Erin Yun

Ask me about the Pippa Park Escape Room, and check out @PippaParkOfficial on YouTube.

"The Escape Room is fantastic. The kids who attended are now reading the series because they love Pippa! They felt a connection to the characters with the escape room and wanted more...I knew immediately they were going to love the YouTube!"

– Amanda Coleman, Youth Services Coordinator, Athens-Limestone Public Library, AL

"I was amazed at the conversations my 7th graders had thanks to the Pippa Park YouTube series... Our librarian shared that several kids from my class came to check out Pippa Park Raises Her Game that day!"

– Christi Thompson, ELA Teacher, Berea Midpark Middle School, OH

"It surprised me (but at the same time, it didn't) how much the music activity resonated with the students. They loved creating their own playlists and sharing where each song went—both in Pippa and in their own lives—and why."

– Sarah Natale, Media Specialist, Sligo Middle School, MD

Hannah Edwards Secrets of Riverway by Ashley Hards

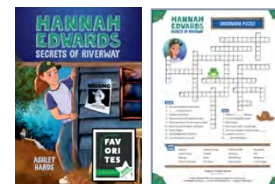

Ask me about having accessible and age-appropriate conversations on ADHD/Neurodiversity.

"Hannah Edwards Secrets of Riverway is the best book I've seen that authentically and comprehensively illustrates the experience of ADHD in girls."

– Tori Kelley, PhD, President and Founder of Central Florida Mental Health, FL

"I felt like author Ashley Hards was writing from inside my ADHD brain! When I told a 5th grade class that the narrator has ADHD, many of them replied, 'I do too!' They were excited to share that trait with a book character like Hannah. I'm looking forward to seeing how sharing the book, and my own ADHD diagnosis, impacts the conversations and relationships I have with the kids."

– Mary Landrum, Children's Librarian, Lexington Public Library, KY
